

A painter's personal ride

WORDS & PHOTOS: Billy Bartels

Being the owner of a prominent custom-paint company and a motorcycle enthusiast sounds like a lot of fun, doesn't it? But it can also be a lot of pressure. Just ask Jeff Theisen. As the leader of Gunslinger Custom Paint, Jeff knows there are certain standards his personal rides need to adhere to, or people will find a reason to use someone else's paint.

So naturally, imagination, skill and clean lines are all drawn together for the boss's ride. In the case of this primary-colored machine, silver-tipped waves of blue wash up on a scarlet tie-dyed
